Law Day 2014: Photo Slideshow

2014 NEWS ARCHIVE03/31/14

Boston College Law School's honorees for this year's Law Day celebration included former Chief Justice of the Massachusetts District Court Lynda M. Connolly, who received the St. Thomas More Award. Law Day is an annual tradition that celebrates BC Law alumni who have made significant contributions to the legal community and the legal profession. The annual Law Day celebration was held May 1, 2014 at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

St. Thomas More Award

The award recognizes members of the legal community who represent, in their professional and private life, the ideals of St. Thomas More.

Former Chief Justice Lynda M. Connolly '74 began her career as a Special Prosecutor in the Major Violator's Division of the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office; practiced corporate and regulatory law at Gallagher & Gallagher, P.C. in Boston; and was appointed to the bench by Governor William F. Weld in 1997. She served as the Acting First Justice in the Charlestown District Court, First Justice of the Dedham District Court, and—in June 2004—was appointed Chief Justice of the District Court, the largest department of the Massachusetts Trial Court.

Hon. David S. Nelson Public Interest Law Award

In recognition of contributions to the public sector

Maryam Elahi '86 is the president and CEO of the Community Foundation of Eastern Connecticut. She joined this organization in September 2013 after twenty-five years of leadership in the international human rights community as an advocate, teacher and grant-maker. She was previously the director of the International Women's Program at the Open Society Foundations, a global philanthropic organization, where she supported organizations empowering women in conflict and post-conflict countries. Prior to OSF, Ms. Elahi was the founding director of the Human Rights Program at Trinity College in Hartford. She established the first undergraduate college human rights program in the United States. She taught courses on international human rights law at Trinity, as well as at the Oxford University Summer International Human Rights Program. During her ten years at Trinity, she traveled extensively to set up international programs with a human rights focus, resulting in the establishment of programs in Cape Town, Santiago, Trinidad, and Hong Kong.

Special Service Award

Given to a faculty member (often at the time of his or her retirement or movement to emeritus status) for extraordinary service to the Law School.

George Brown is the Robert Drinan, S.J., Professor of Law. Most recently he served as Interim Dean of the Law School, 2010-2011. He is a specialist in the field of federal-state relations and government ethics. In both areas he draws on his extensive experience in state government. He has served as Legislative Assistant to the Governor of Massachusetts and as Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts. In 1994, Governor William Weld appointed him Chair of the Massachusetts State Ethics Commission. Professor Brown is the author of over forty law review articles, and is best known for his articles on the jurisdiction of federal courts and on political corruption. He has also served as Chair of the Section on Federal Courts of the Association of American Law Schools.

Established by presidential proclamation in 1958, Law Day is a long-standing tradition across the nation and at Boston College Law School. Its purpose is to celebrate the most important goals of the legal profession: to advance equality and justice, encourage observation and enforcement of the law, and to foster respect for law and an understanding of its essential place in the life of every citizen.
